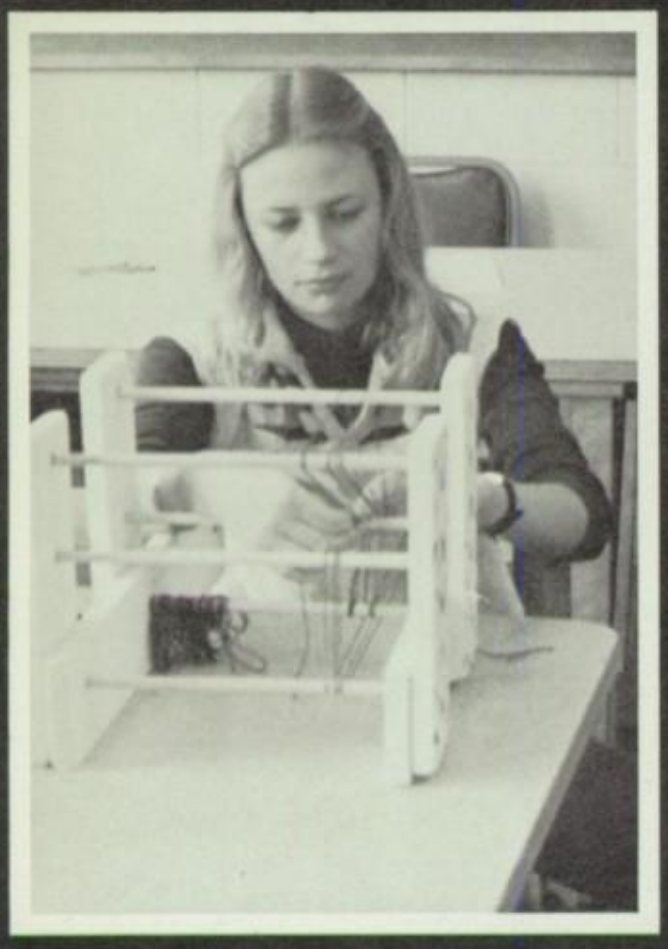
Volume 23

The question of reality has plagued man for centuries. Such men as Aristotle and Einstein spent lifetimes puzzling over the true nature of reality. Today, this question of reality remains enigmatic; however, most people will agree that attitudes and ideals that are being developed during our adolescent years will somehow help to shape our realities of tomorrow.

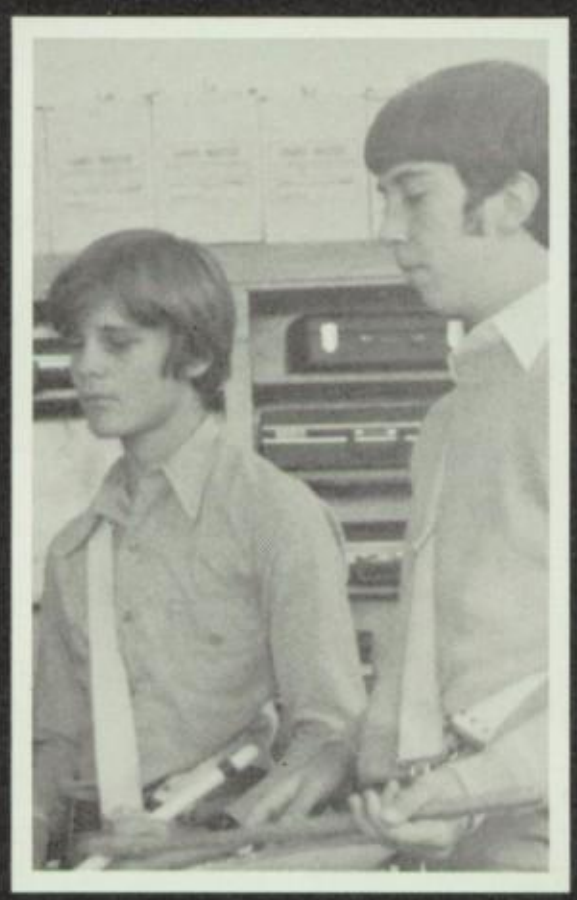
There are many different aspects, of shapes, or our present realities; the music, the laughter, the tears, the sports, the people, are all shapes of present realities. There is, of course, an inner side of our natures that few people ever see. Therein lie our deepest feelings, our emotions, and our convictions. This inner side influences our realities more than we might imagine. Also, certain great men claim they have discerned yet another quality inherent in all men. A quality continuous and unchanging of which little can be clearly said. These men have linked their successes in various fields with this deep inherent quality. We see that there are many factors that shape our realities, some external, some internal. It is with these influences in mind that we approach "Student Life" with the purpose of displaying the inner as well as the outward activities that will determine our tomorrows.

Shape of Art



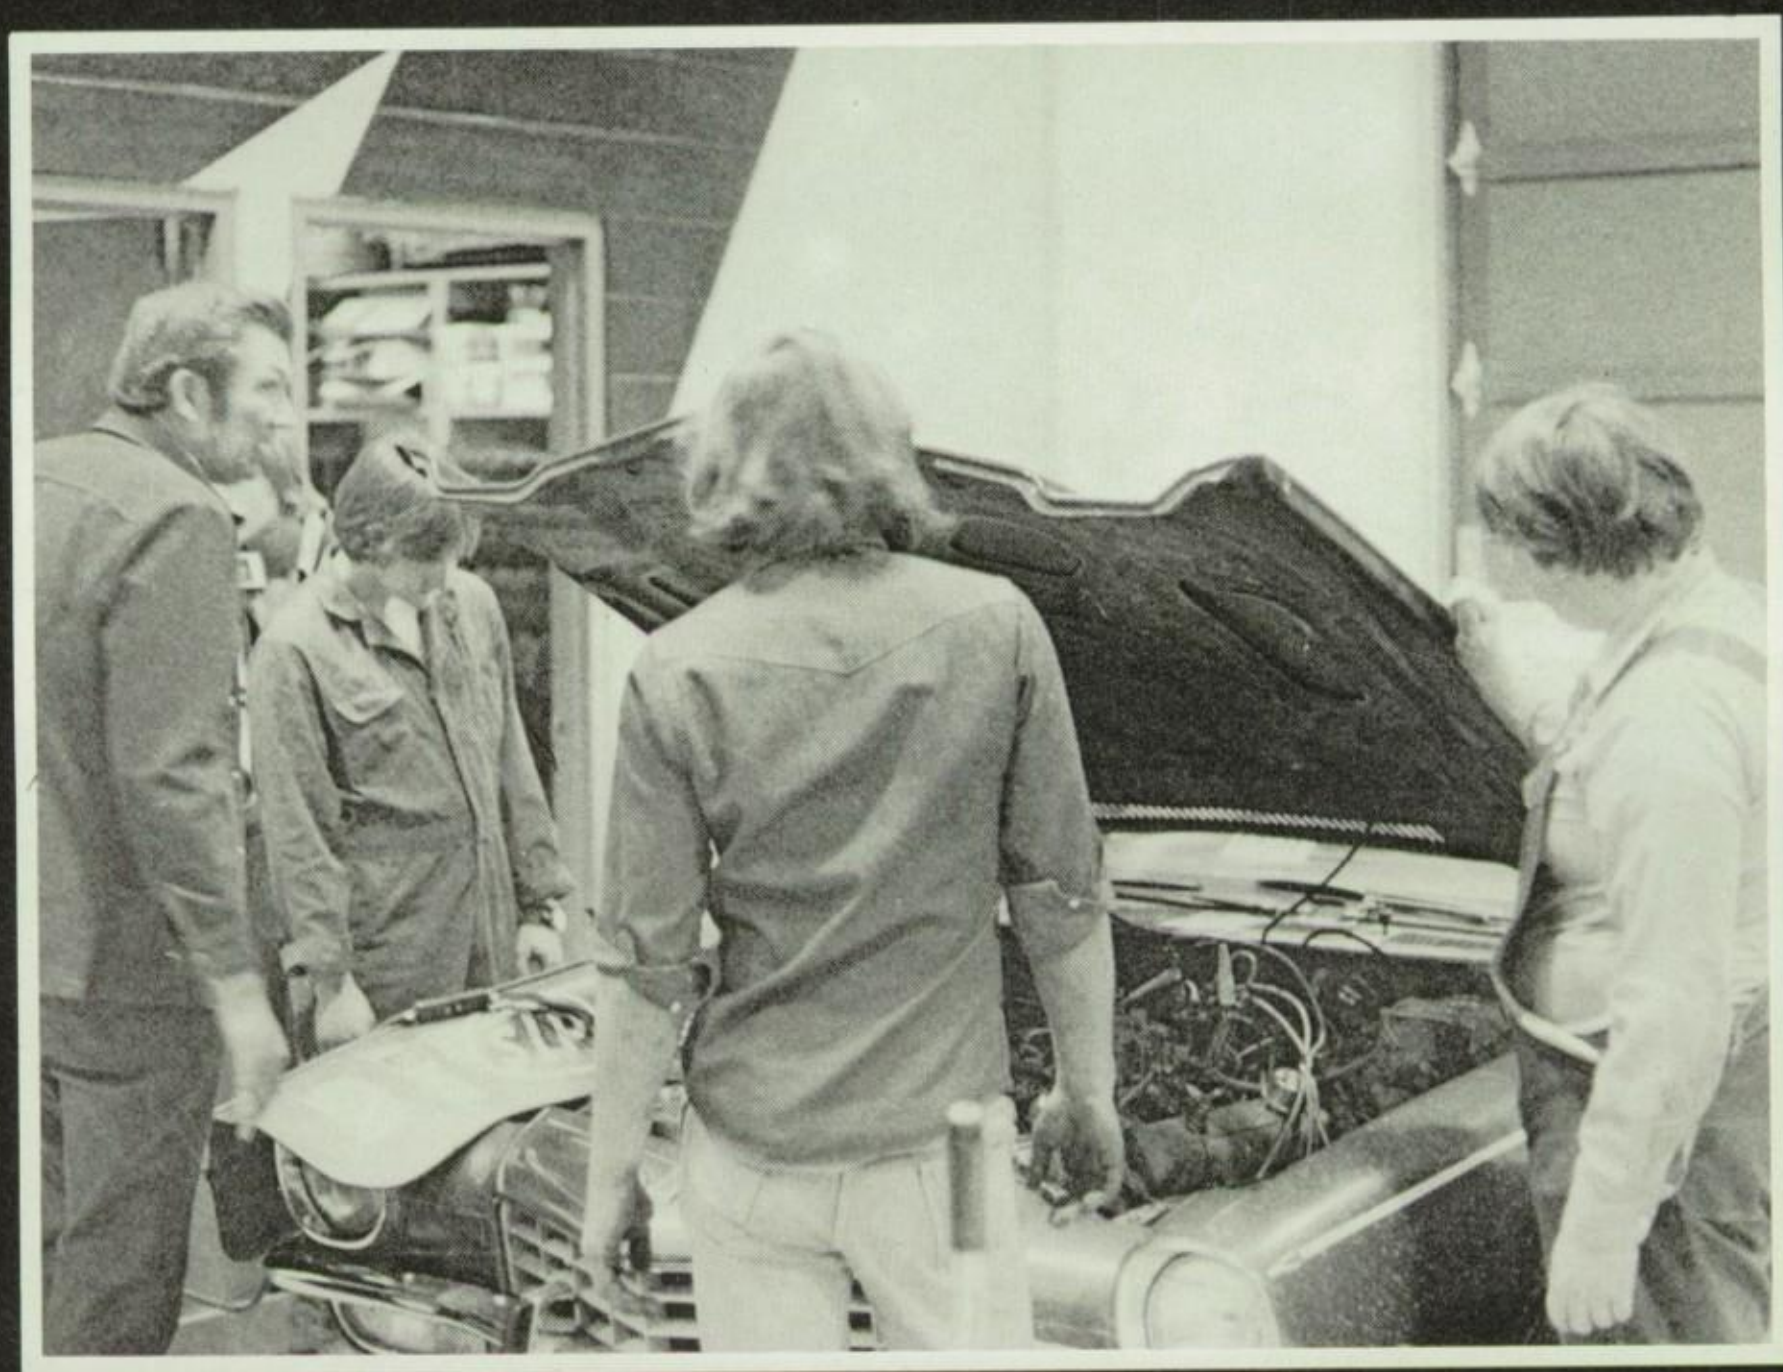
There are those of us who find the rendition of reality in the various art forms a very valuable and challenging form of personal expression. The embodiment of the artist's imagination in physical form is the goal of any artistic endeavor, whether it satisfies a practical need or merely our urge to create. These various forms of creation include the abstract as well as the realistic and all are based to a greater or lesser degree upon the artist's personal view point. For this reason art tends to be a very personal thing, evoking different feelings and emotions within each of us. Without these various personal view points, neither beauty nor art could exist in this world.

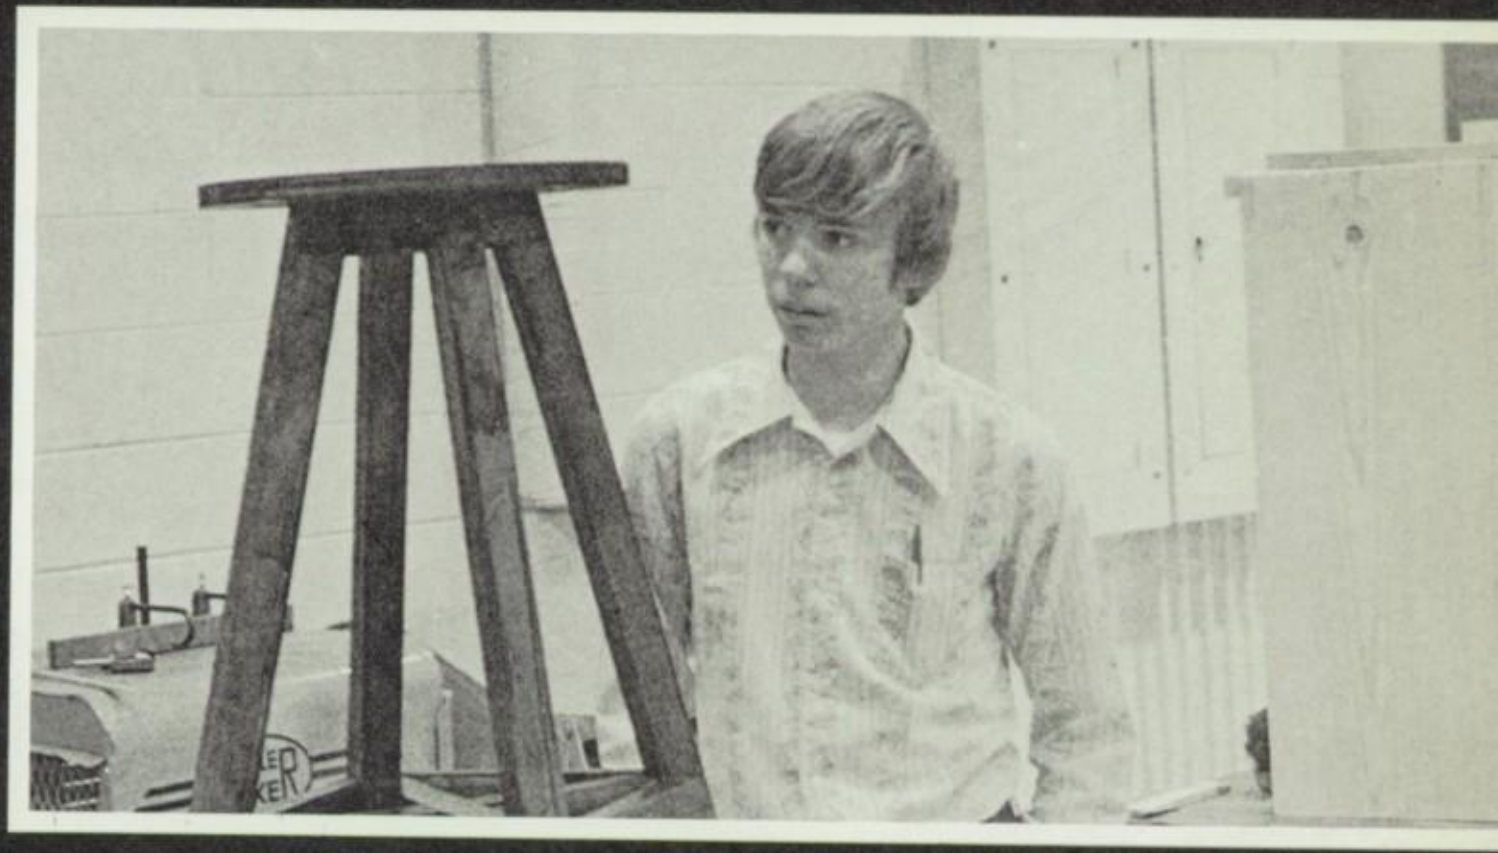
Shape of Band and Chorus



Music is another very personal form of art. Reflecting the different forms and aspects of life, music enchants the soul, mind, and body of man. Music enhances school spirit, makes us sad, arouses our passions, and seems to be an integral part of life. At school we may hear the NCHS Marching Governors on any given morning practicing on the football field, or maybe even the chorus practicing in the auditorium. At several times during the year, we have dances in the gym, and of course, there's always that event of events, the prom. All of these things are an experience at NCHS, a unique musical experience.

Shape of Vocation

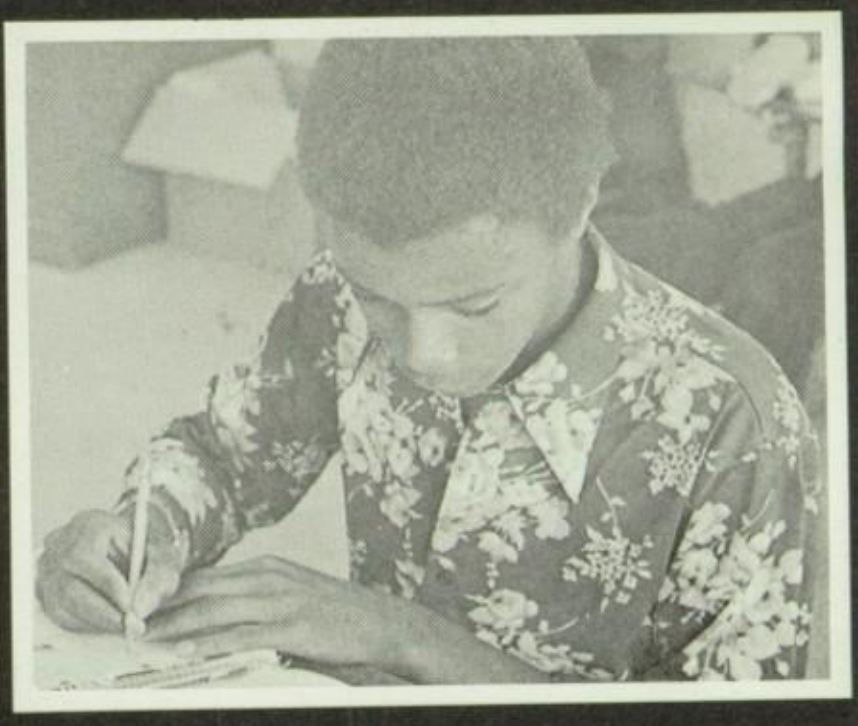




The Vocational Wing is a realatively recent addition to Nelson County High School. Providing the means of education in many trades, the "Vocom" is invaluable to those students who want to learn a trade. The old criticism of a high school education was that it did not properly prepare the student for life in the real world. At NCHS, students are given various opportunities for shaping their own personal realities through careers in business, cosmetology, food services, automotive mechanics, building trades, health services, clothing and home furnishings, horticulture, consumer home economics, or agriculture.

Shape of Academics

The academic courses at Nelson County High School, like any other high school, are presented with higher education in mind. Many students feel that college is their gateway to the future. A college education, however, does not necessarily assure the high paying occupation that it once did. Today there is a greater element of risk involved. Why, then, do some people still choose college? Perhaps Aristotle had the answer when he said, "All men by nature desire to know. Certain people seem to be born with the inherent question of 'Why'?" These people jump at every opportunity to expand their knowledge and concept of reality. For people of this nature, college is the logical next step after high school. For, as Emerson once said, "The things taught in colleges and schools are not an education, but the means of education."

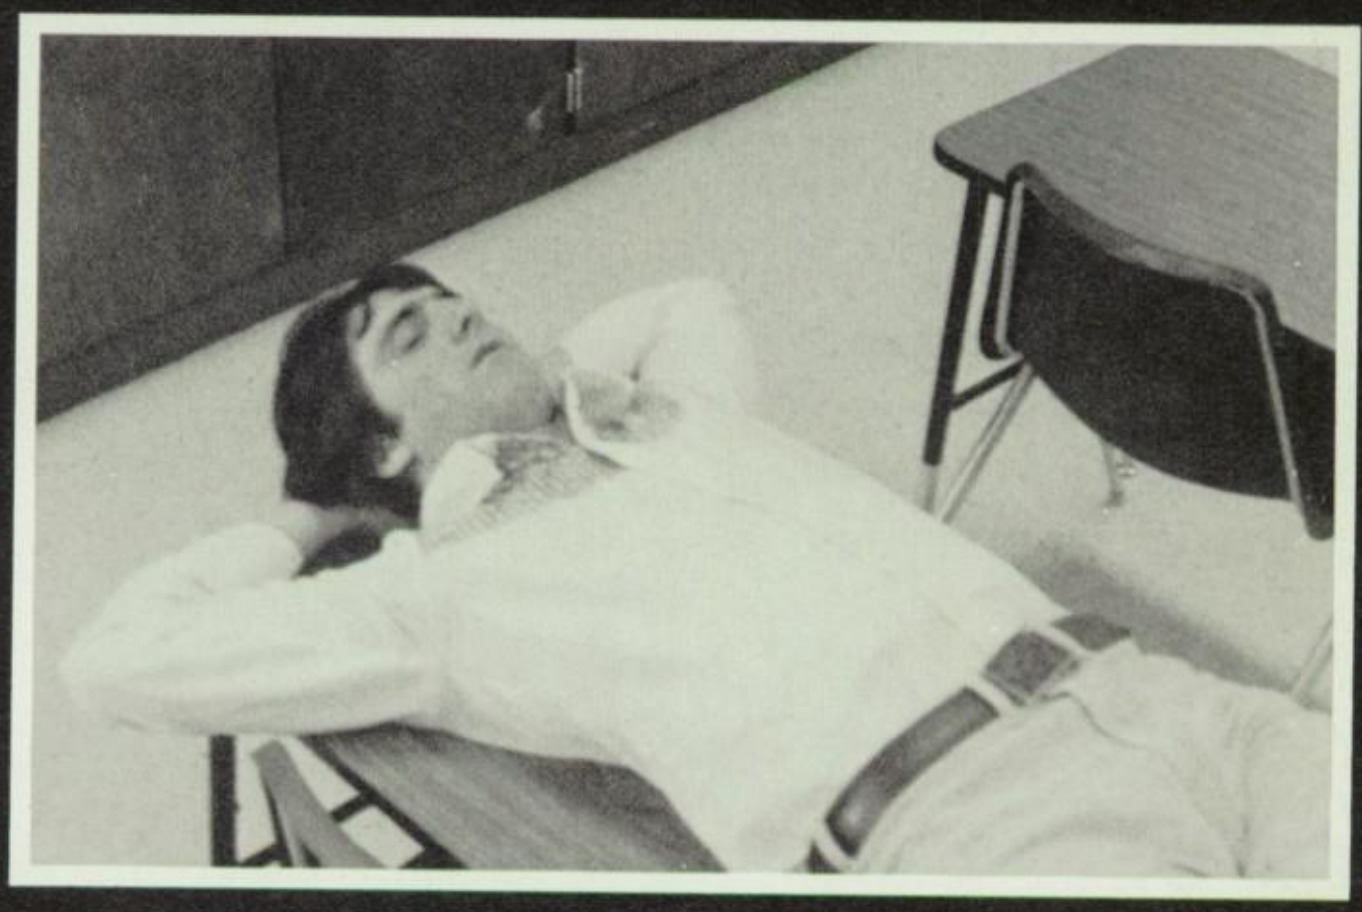


Shape of the Past

We can't very well talk of influences that have shaped our present realities without pausing a moment to consider our past and our heritage. Our forefathers held dear many hopes and dreams that have been realized by us today. Without yesterday's dreams, today would not exist, and neither will tomorrow be unless we hope and dream today.

Shape of Moods

It has been said that reality is subjective, merely a reflection of our state of mind. We all have hopes, dreams, and fears. We're human. Because of these hopes, dreams, and fears, we are subject to a thousand different moods; happiness, sadness, love, loneliness, etc. These are some of the more personal things in life that we share with those who are close to us. In a sense, we are at any given time, just what we feel. Our feelings and emotions determine those realities we would have and those we would not. Feelings determine our friends, foes, lovers, and associates. Since we all must find our place in the scheme of things, our deepest and truest feelings and emotions will help us.



While You Can.
